"I believe that it is scalable business models and innovative entrepreneurs that build the African economy. At the heart of this is productivity... the endless pursuit of being better and faster at what you do. Being more effective and efficient." - Buntu

"We invited Mr. Majaja to deliver a talk reflecting on the importance of having a business plan, and what a business plan entails. Given his track record in the world of business and entrepreneurship, we felt it would be very beneficial to our members.

The session was exceptionally insightful, as members were given a platform to ask questions directly to Mr. Majaja. The session was very well handled, and reviews from our members were positive, as they mentioned that they would recommend such sessions to other people. On behalf of Young Corporate Leaders, it was an honour and privilege to have you with us. We wish you all the best in your future endeavours."

Mr. Thabang Mokgosi – Chairperson of Young Corporate Leaders, University of Pretoria

Buntu has been enterprising since university, from selling branding and eventing services to developing VoIP SaaS services. All these failed, but he took the lessons and his background in chemical engineering into the business world as a strategy and innovation consultant with global and boutique firms. He has worked with entrepreneurs at a grassroots level to set up their businesses and has supported high-growth enterprises in Africa to raise finance from around the world, primarily east Asia. Today he builds digital services for entrepreneurship and education development.

Buntu has numerous postgraduate qualifications including a Post Graduate Diploma (Hons) Business Administration from Gordon Institute of Business Science (2016). He then completed a Master of Management specialising in Entrepreneurship and New Venture Creation (2018). His thesis was mapping the challenges and needs of the entrepreneurship ecosystem in Johannesburg, South Africa, from the entrepreneur's perspective.

Entrepreneurship Ecosystems and Technology are Buntu's focus areas. His role as a CEO at the SA innovation Summit is part of a personal purpose to develop innovation in Africa through entrepreneurship while leveraging digital technology as a tool for creating network efficiencies and accessibility resources. As a technologist, he works with user facing web platforms/applications that he has designed and managed the development of, ranging from an online resource directory for South African entrepreneurs, digital matchmaking applications to an online accelerator (eLearning platform) and virtual mentorship platform.

The SA Innovation Summit is an innovation platform with Africa's largest innovation conference, a TechTribe Accelerator that has worked with +2,000 entrepreneurs and a TechTribe Community of +1,500 active members. He is a data science enthusiast and property investor. He is the author of the book: Starting your start-up in 90 days, as well as podcast host on Ubuntu Dreams Podcast – your voice of Africa rising.

This year he will celebrate his four-year anniversary with his beloved wife. As a certified Yoga instructor and Taekwondo black belt he loves training regularly and helping people get fit and healthy. He considers himself a warrior against unjust inequality. He dreams to touch millions of African entrepreneurs and lives, through innovation and investing in innovative solutions in education, real-estate, food security, water, and renewable energy.
